The PiP Collective
A Movement

What is PiP Collective?

PiP Collective is a peer community for people working in and supporting palliative care. It exists because palliative care programs face real and distinct challenges: financial pressure, payer complexity, regulatory uncertainty, staffing demands, and software that was never designed for it.

This community is a place to share what is working, solve what is not, and help each other build programs that thrive. It operates on the belief that the people doing the work are the best source of standards, models, and solutions for the work.

"If you want to shape how palliative care works in the real world, you belong at the table."

Perry Farmer
President,
Crossroads Hospice and Palliative Care

Who We Are

PiP Collective is open by invitation to anyone with a role in shaping palliative care. There is no hierarchy within the community. The only expectation is that you show up, share openly, and keep what is shared here confidential.

- Clinical leaders and program directors
- Operations and compliance teams
- Billing and revenue cycle professionals
- Consultants helping programs get off the ground
- Supporters and partners in palliative care

How We Meet

QUARTERLY

Virtual Sessions
60 to 75 minutes. Review KPIs, discuss trends, and share what is working across programs.

ANNUAL

In-Person Working Session
A half-day gathering to align on shared standards and set direction together.

AS NEEDED

Topic Micro Sessions
Focused deep dives on staffing, referrals, payer challenges, or whatever the group needs.

Community Principles

These are not rules. They are the shared commitments that make this community worth being part of.

- Show up. The value of this community depends on consistent participation.
- Share openly. Bring your real experience, not a polished version of it.
- Maintain confidentiality. What is shared in PiP stays in PiP.
- No dues, no hierarchy. This is a peer community. Everyone is here as an equal.
- Assume good intent. We are all figuring this out together.

Organizing Structure

PiP Collective is currently convened and coordinated by Curantis Solutions, whose mission is to serve those who serve others in end-of-life care. Curantis handles the operational work that makes community possible: member communications, event coordination, digital resources, and the member registry. This is the infrastructure work. Someone has to do it, and Curantis believes this community is worth doing it for.

Curantis's role is acknowledged openly. Members can expect Curantis to participate in the community as a peer, not as a host with an agenda. Curantis may, over time, share how community input shapes its thinking and its products. It will never use PiP as a sales venue, and it will never share member information outside the community. A designated organizing team within Curantis holds responsibility for PiP operations. That team can be reached at pip@curantissolutions.com.

Future Governance

As PiP Collective grows, the community may choose to evolve its governance structure, introduce member-led committees, explore dues-based sustainability, or incorporate as an independent entity. Any such changes will be made with full member input and communicated transparently. The goal is for PiP to outlast any single sponsor or organizing team. The community belongs to its members.
